

EQUITY IN EMERGENCY MANAGEMENT

Moderators

Jaye Cromwell is originally from the US Midwest, but considers herself to be a true Oregonian after nearly 10 years. She holds a Bachelor's degree in International Community Development from the University of Oregon where she studied agriculture in South Asia before going on to open her own small CSA farm. Jaye spent three years working as the Community Engagement Manager for the McMinnville area Habitat for Humanity where she learned the importance building community resilience. Jaye is now a current student in the Masters of Urban and Regional Planning program at Portland State University studying resiliency planning and equity in disaster response and works as an equity planning intern for the Multnomah County Office of Emergency Management.

Sabina Roan is a student in the Master of Urban and Regional Planning program and a University Studies peer mentor at Portland State University. Her hometown is Los Angeles, where she spent four years working in transportation and land use planning. She holds a bachelor degree in Urban Systems Geography from McGill University in Montréal, Canada. Roots as a youth leader in social and environmental justice led her to see the importance of policy in social change. Her goals in graduate school include elevating equity in urban planning and operationalizing equity principles. Recent highlights include representing Portland State University at the 2018 PolicyLink conference and receiving the 2019 Beverley Swaim Staley Leadership Scholarship from the Portland Women in Transportation Seminar Chapter.
